reduced wages for labor and deflated values of property. That rule has held in Canada and everywhere else, as well as in the United States. High rates of interest cannot be paid out of reduced earnings.

That would seem a fairly obvious proposition. It is in fact been obvious to everyone except the "financial die-hard" who refused to take his share of the cost of restoring economic balance. But as the latter happened to be in control of vast supplies of capital, the world has had to wait in distress and turmoil until he came out of the trance and started dreaming about collecting boom interest rates from empty pockets.

Mr. M. K. Meyers, who will hardly be called a near-economist or a half-branded visionary, argued that interest rates were the major cause of the depression. He points out that from 1924 to 1928 the people of the United States made investments in productive and trade enterprises at the amazing rate of $500,000,000 a month for forty-eight months on end.

At those rates the interest rates on loans already "higher than has ever in the history of the world been earned by industry over a period of time," at last reached such a height that borrowing money to finance business became impossible.

There is to be said for the explanation that the stoppage of investment and the start of the depression were timed almost to a month.

If those who control money have at last realized there is no use dreaming about collecting fabulous rates of usury, and are willing to return capital at rates which can be paid, the process of recovery, which has been going on since the start of the depression, will be hastened.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Here in Alberta we usually associate manifestations of sadism in the newly adolescent, with the higher education. According to news despatches from Victoria, B.C., it has been recently practised by a group of young men on those of their own kind who have been driven desperate by desire for work and wages.

It reads like a chapter of medieval tortures, the details of how the initiates were swung by their toes from beams, branded with the initials of the order with red hot spikes, and their bodies enclosed in jacketed garments. Because the details of these alleged cruelties are so closely connected with the imagination of the people, they will be read with horror by thousands who do not feel the same sense of revulsion to cruelties practised indirectly upon the large percentage of the population of Canada by those who for self-interest keep money scarce and dear and make unemployment a normal condition of existence.

If you think it incredible that residents of Victoria would agree to undergo torture to join a secret society, remember that a few years ago in the same vicinity a half-breed East Indian called himself "Brother Twelve," succeeded in inducing large numbers of better-bred and well-educated people to have over their property and wealth to him in return for membership in an esoteric cult known as the Aquarian Foundation. Part of their mumbo-jumbo consisted in holding sacred rites in the dark and dark spots in being misfortune and death upon the attorney-general of that day, and upon any other of the great financial accounts from "Brother Twelve."

The good folk of Victoria are not hard-headed common sense people like ourselves. We only give support to the Aquarian cult because of the promises of gentlemen who promise us all $25 a month which I'll vote for their candidates getting them out of this air or by "a few on the price spread."

The further east they go, the more hypocrisy meets the unemployed. One of the most systematic attempts at a coup d'état was made by a great actor at Regina.

He said, referring with indignation to the spathy of the government in its dealings with the unemployed:

"They realize they are lives that they are playing with... Nine years of wasted effort before the government will be forced to take jobs that long... My first job is to give employment to Canadians."

This wasn't said last week when Mr. H. H. Bennett called to see his appeal for office in the railway policy to stop the trek of the relief marchers to Ottawa to demand work and wages. It was said by the same man when he was the same name on June 10, 1930, in the armories at Regina.

The Richard Bedford Bennett who uttered them on June 10, 1930, was appealing for support from the unemployed. The Richard Bedford Bennett who uttered them on June 10, 1930, was appealing for support from the unemployed.

Good Affirmations

By DOCTOR FRANK MCCOY

A person who has acquired the habit of worrying usually imagines that his financial problems are more difficult than those of his friends, or that his family difficulties are more serious, or that his health is more impaired, when the truth is that most people who worry have no more difficult problems than any other person has to face.

The travel through life is a steady stream of problems which day brings its new problems to solve. We all have our moments of happiness and our times of sorrow. Life is almost evenly divided between the lights and the shadows. Problems that seem the most difficult often inevitably solve themselves in the course of time.

When a person has two paths of conduct, it is understood that he will usually find that either of them would be suitable.

The two problems that cause the most worry are finances and family affairs. If you find yourself worrying about something, you should take an inventory of yourself. A careful analysis will show a special piece of the puzzle usually put into the trouble if you are honest with yourself.

Most people try to live beyond their incomes. This is only a foolish pandering to vanity. Most people can control their expenses by making a few changes in their habits. You can enjoy a neighborhood picture show as much as more expensive entertainment, and a round steak at thirty-five cents a pound is really as tasty and wholesome as an expensive steak at twice the price.

It takes two to make a quarrel, and you will usually find that where you are having difficulty with some member of your family, you yourself, are largely at fault. A little concession will often make things pleasanter without costing anything.

Worry and anxiety waste a terrible amount of energy, and so greatly impair the functions of the brain that serious diseases are often the consequence.

It is a good plan to give yourself affirmative suggestions before you go to sleep, such as the following: "I am growing stronger; mentally, I am increasing my knowledge; and financially, I am saving a little more each day. I am contented with life and confident of myself. I feel friendly toward the world, and things which I considered difficulties are as interesting to me as the problems of checkers or chess."

You can cultivate a calmness of mind by the Hindu method of not emotionally reacting to the problems of life. The calmness that occurs is not nearly as important as the way to reach it. You can help yourself a great deal by using healthful affirmations, but you must also learn to cultivate the mind, directing, exercising and proper mental attitude.

The emotions upon which the mind dwells become the strongest.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION: Mr. Robert L. asks: "I have a kind of a strain in the back, feet feel cold that the fluid from the kidneys is cloudy, and don't remember things as quickly as I used to. Maybe I have kidney trouble. My wife says I believe I have Bright's Disease. Can you tell me what to do if that is what is wrong?"

ANSWER: As a general rule, the chronic form of Bright's Disease occurring in the patient of middle age is not a disease of the kidneys without very definite symptoms. The patient gradually drifts into ill-health and by the time he is in the hospital he is in a very bad way.

However, a man must give Mr. Howard credit for suggesting a platform and asking for a platform. The other speakers so far referred to the case of the kidney disease. Bright's Disease has recently been admitted to the bar and is now a recognized disease.

When you have a case where the law is not strong for you, play up the evidence. But if your evidence is weak, play down the law. But when you have neither the law nor the evidence, play up your favor, then give your opponent his.

The Alberts gets the only thing they have and then their speaker. They are facing reality. Fourteen years of power has been a great disappointment to the taxpayer. The people are disillusioned, so is the government. They now seem to be in a very bad way.

Duggan's real address, like the speaker in the past, convince the public that the law is not strong for you, play up the evidence. But if your evidence is weak, play down the law. But when you have neither the law nor the evidence, play up your favor, then give your opponent his.

Don't be the hand that feeds you. It is a rule of thumb that a man who is already eliminated from the law. No one else is. It is a rule of thumb that a man who is already eliminated from the law. No one else is.

On June 27 it will pay you to do some constructive thinking. A few minutes spent in serious self-analysis, or honest introspection, cannot do you any harm. If you are a social affixer, be careful that offense is not given by your becoming too much absorbed in paying attention to some one person. Be careful and endeavor to make a good impression, with ambitious hopes to your kind in their endeavor, will do well to turn the other back, before giving vent to any unkind remarks.

If a woman, and June 27 is your birthday, should you have a decided nervous disposition, you will find it much happier to give to suppress it. Avoid trying to regulate the lives of other people. You should find happiness in your own life.

ONE HOUR OF GLORY

Finland has won distinction. It is in the line-height, and on the front page. It has attained world leadership in one important branch of national achievement. Its competitors have all dropped out of the race, and yielded it the laurels.

Finland paid its war debt instantly to Washington. And it is the only one of Uncle Sam's European war debtors to remain on account. The others acknowledged the approach of the due date by sending him more or less casual notes saying he need not expect to see anything from them.
